The Gromyko-Genscher meeting on Saturday and Sunday, coming just as the peace movement begins a week of protests over the stationing of U.S. medium-range missiles in West Germany, is expected to focus on stalled U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

It is not merely snobbery, for there is a gap in quality between the top models and the other bicycles made in China. About 45 percent of the 24.2 million bicycles manufactured last year were considered substandard by the government, although they often cost as much as better but scarcer models.

The result has been a ripe market for mislabeled bicycles in China. Zhang Jingfu, the minister in charge of the state economic commission, hinted at the problem when he complained in late August that "there have been cases of usurping brand names and packag-ing of quality goods on the domes-tic market." The scope of the coun-terfeiting has unfolded bit by bit in a newspaper, the Economic Daily, and regional radio broadcasts.
The Economic Daily was tipped

When it looked into the matter, the newspaper learned that 39 ing damaged or rejected parts from in Shanghai. Trade in bootleg labicycle factories, assembling and selling them.

Subsequent investigations have turned up counterfeit bicycles in 14 of China's 29 provinces and municipalities. By scavenging the scrap-heaps of seven or eight bicycle factories in northern China, counterfeiters have been able to sell their copies for the equivalent of $60 to $75 to retail stores and cooperatives that unloaded them on unsuspecting peasants for the full price of $85 or more.

The legitimate factories did not complain because they were paid more for the junked parts than the pittance they usually got from recy-cling companies, particularly as the demand began driving up the prices of the scrap. It was the elegant labels that persuaded the consumers not to look too closely at the counterfeit bicycles, some of which turned out to have patched inner tubes and

Tens of thousands of Everlasting decals were later stolen from the factory bels got so brisk that some commune sideline enterprises in Zhejiang and Guangdong provinces in southeastern China bave been caught producing the same decals for only 4 cents a set.

Some counterfeiting is undoubtedly due to the exuberance of peasants who have taken too seriously the party's admonition to "get rich through labor." But police have also found criminals moving in to make an easy profit.

A Beijing radio broadcast last month told of Jiang Fugui, a convicted swindler who was released from a labor camp for medical treatment last April and promptly set up an underground assembly line in Tianjin with several cronies. They shipped over 1,000 fake Flying Pigeons to Henan and Shandong provinces. Jiang's share of the spoils exceeded $10,000 by the time he was arrested Monday stepped up propaganda attacks on the United States, accusing Washington of coordinating a Western campaign of subversion backed by espionage activities of U.S. diplomats.

An embassy spokesman in Warsaw declined to comment but the two attacks within 12 hours occurred five days before an important Communist Party Central Committee meeting, which may test the strength of hard-line opposition to the government of General Wojciech Jaruzelski.

General Jaruzelski himself backed the new propaganda campaign Monday in an article in a party periodical, Problems of Peace and Socialism. A television broadcast Sunday alleged that diplomats from the U.S. Embassy in Warsaw and consulates in Posnan and Krakow systematically spied on Poland for the CIA. It named a dozen former and current envoys it said had spied on military installations, attended meetings of the banned Solidarity union and helped print Solidarity

Greece Says U.S. Jets Violated Borders

ATHENS (AP) — Greece made a formal protest Monday to the United States and alleged a violation of Greek airspace by U.S. planes taking part in a NATO exercise.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman said a senior embassy official was called to the Foreign Ministry where an oral complaint was made. The spokesman said "clarification of the incidents will be sought."

On Sunday, the Greek government said a formation of U.S. planes taking part in NATO's fall maneuvers in the Aegean Sea area entered Greece's 10-mile (16-kilometer) airspace zone above the island of Ikaria. A government announcement said two other U.S. formations had "infringed international air traffic rules." Greece palled out of the NATO exercise two weeks ago because NATO did not include the Greek island of Limnos in the maneuvers.

The official Iraqi news agency quoted Mr. Hussein as saying that "our victory on the Iranian enemy will be achieved soon and the enemy will suffer a decisive defeat." His threat came only one day after Iraq reportedly received five Super Etendard fighter bombers, equipped with Exocet missiles. Iraq already has more than 20 Exocet missiles, the type that Argentina used to sink two British ships during the Falkland Islands war in 1982, but they are reportedly being used on belicopters.

Iran threatened to "inflict severe blows" on France if the planes were sent to Iraq for use in the Gulf war.

Many Democrats in Congress, while frequently attacking Mr. Watt and his policies, actually regarded him as a political asset for them because of the trouble he caused the Reagan administration.

On the other hand, Mr. Watt had many pluses as an administrator and politician. He had the support of many Western governors and political leaders of both parties for some, but by no means all, of his policies. They favored his plans for reducing federal control over Westem land use.

Democrats Questioning Straw Polls: Are They Too Early, Too Costly?

By Howell Raines New York Times Service

DES MOINES, Iowa - Knowing laughter rippled through the audience at the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner last weekend when Senator Ernest F. Hollings brought up the subject of tickets to the

"I first want to thank Vice President Mondale and Senator Cranston for getting is our tickets, so we could be here," said Mr. Hollings, a Democratic presidential candidate octed for his sarcastic wit.

But the laughter from the audience and from the other six presidential candidates in the said of the six presidential candidates.

dential candidates had an uneasy ring to it, because everyone knew that the senator from South Carolina was raising a serious issue haunting the straw poll process.

Michigan Repeals Primary Elections For Presidency

New York Times Service LANSING, Michigan - Michigan has become the largest state in the United States to do away with presidential primary elections. The decision will leave delegate-selection procedures for the 1984 national conventions entirely in the hands of caucuses or conventions run by the state's political parties. The repeal was overwhelmingly approved by the state legislature last week, after both the Democratic and Republican state organi-zations signaled their intentions to ignore the state's presidential primary. Michigan's system, according to leaders of both parties, invited crossover voting and had undermined party discipline in the

The move is expected to save Michigan taxpayers about $5 mil-lion in 1984.

Michigan Democrats began seeking a change after the 1972 presidential primary, in which Governor George C. Wallace of Alabama embarrassed much of the party's leadership by upsetting their preferred candidate, Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota. Mr. Wallace's victory resulted in part from strong support by inde-pendents and Republicans who voted in the Democratic primary.

Early this year, the Democrats said they would abandon the 1984 presidential primary in favor of delegate-selection caucuses that would be closed to non-Democrats, and which they first adopted in huge sums of money on making a strong showing in such early, unofficial samples of electorate opinion amounts to a kind of vote buying, as Senator John Glenn of Ohio and other candidates have charged.

This in turn is related to the deeper question of whether the nonbinding straw polls held this year in California, Massachusetts, Wisconsin, Maine and Iowa have transformed the Democratic contest into a crazily speeded-up horse

Proponents of the straw polls. such as former Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Senator Alan Cranston of California, argue that the polls raise levels of local interest, provide a vehicle for building strong grass-roots organizations and force the candidates to go directly to voters who would otherwise see them only on television.

Critics, including Mr. Holllings, Mr. Glenn, Senator Gary Hart of Colorado and former Governor Reubin Askew of Florida, charge that straw polls provide an unfair advantage to well-linanced candi-dates willing to provide bus rides, hotel rooms or meal tickets in return for votes.

These candidates and such party officials as Charles Manatt, chairman of Democratic National Committee, would like to see the Democrats abandon straw polls for events such as the issues forum sponsored io Manhattao last Thursday by the New York State Democratic Party.

Another element of the debate over straw polls has to do with the role of the press. Several political professionals and scholars say political reporters, overeager for the campaign to begin, emphasize the straw polls out of proportion.

used in straw polls.

Tickets to the Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner, which is also the state Democratic Party's annual fund-raising event, cost $40 a seat this year for main-floor tables and $10 for balcony seats. David Nagel, the state party chairman, said the Cranstoo and Mondale organizations, through the coordinated pur-chases of their supporters rather than the direct expenditure of campaign funds, had acquired about 1,200 tickets apiece.

In addition, he said, organized labor groups supporting Mr. Mon-dale bought 1,570 tickets. Thus, the result was made predictable by ticket sales. Mr. Mondale was first with 1,948 votes and

Mr. Cranston second with 1,534. The polling process was stricter in Maine, California, Wisconsin and other states, where only delegates to the state coovention were eligible to vote. But mooey also played a role, with Mr. Mondale and Mr. Cranston heavily out-

Mr. Cranston, starting as a lightly regarded candidate, occded straw polls for a different reason. They give a dark horse a chance to emerge," said Sergio Bendixen, a Cranston strategist. "These things give you tremeodous publicity, much more publicity than you get from taking strong positions on an issue or making a big speech."

Purge of Chinese Party Will Target Radical Opponents of Deng Policies

By Michael Weisskopf

Washington Post Service BELING - The Chinese Commooist Party's long-plaoned bloodless purge will be aimed at reforming or expelling all those opposed to the pragmatic policies of Deng Xisoping.

The party purification - to be the first since Mr. Deng's moderate faction seized control of China five years ago - has initially targeted three million Communists who rose to power during Mao's radical Cultural Revolution from 1966 to 1976, according to diplomats.

Many of those dichard Maoists helped remove Mr. Deng and his associates during the chaotic de-cade, and they have been blamed for continuing to sabotage his reform programs today.

Party officials have taken pains to distinguish between the coming purge—they prefer to call it "rectification" — and past campaigns that turned into witch-hunts. When the party's general secre-

U.S. Hopes Fade for Diplomatic Victory in Southern Africa

LUANDA, Angola — Three months ago, U.S. diplomats were confident they were on the path toward agreement on an overall regional settlement in southern Afri-

The expectations followed ocarly two years of talks with Angolan officials in Washington, New York, Luanda and Paris.

But the Reagan administratioo's hopes for a major diplomatic vicin southern Africa are dying on the battlefields of Angola. West-ern diplomatic analysts here now say that Angolan mistrust of U.S. and South African intentions, Soviet pressure and, most of all, intensified military operations by the op-position forces of Jonas Savimbi's National Union for the Total lodependence of Angola, or UNITA, have combined to undermine prospects for a diplomatic break-through.

Recent military successes by Mr.

Savimbi's South African-backed guerrillas have increased Angola's dependence on the Soviet bloc and on the estimated 20,000 to 25,000 Cuban troops here. The successes also have dimmed prospects that Angola's Marxist leaders will agree to a U.S. proposal for withdrawal of the Cubans as one element in a regional settlement including independence for South African-controlled South-West Africa, which is also known as Namibia, and U.S. diplomatic recognition of Angola.

U.S. officials believed an agreement would vindicate the Reagan administration's insistence that a Cuban withdrawal be part of the framework of a Namibia settlement, a policy that has come under heavy attack by African leaders.

"The Angolans are sincerely convinced that with the military situation as had as it is now, send ing the Cubans home would be diplomat here.

Making Up With China

President Reagan may not wish to claim loud credit for it in his political heartland, but he has managed a substantial recovery in American relations with the People's Republic of China. Not without reason, the Chinese had feared he might tip U.S. policy back toward heavy-handed favor for Taiwan in accordance with his well-known pre-White House predilections. The latest milestone on the road back was Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's recent trip to Beijing. The next should be the planned exchange of visits next year by President Reagan and Premier Zhao Ziyang.

It now appears that the crucial event in the rebuilding of U.S.-Chinese ties was the sequence a year ago - begun by Mr. Reagan's first secretary of state and consummated by his second - in which the president asserted the continuing U.S. interest in the security of Taiwan but did so in terms that Beijing found it could abide. At that point the administration could start turning the focus of its relationship with China to more congenial concerns.

A series of advances was made in the perennially disputed fields of trade and technology; these advances allow Washington to portray itself plausibly as attentive to China's development needs. Mr. Weinberger's purpose was to demonstrate American concern for China's security needs as well, by re-engaging China in a continuing strategic dialogue and by moving into military exchanges and arms sales.

Mr. Weinberger's hosts took his anti-Soviet alarms as occasion to reaffirm the "independent" foreign policy line with which they have attempted to balance off the United States and the Soviet Union in the last few years. There seems to have been, however, more of a meeting of strategic minds than was apparent. Military exchanges are to begin, and sales of certain equipment may not be too far behind.

There are definite limits - even for a president who has the containment of Soviet power foremost on his mind -on how far ties can be developed. It has always been reckless to ask or expect China to join the United States as a military ally against Moscow, whose paranois on the subject is bottomless and should not be stoked carelessly. Nevertheless there are considerable strategic advantages in having the Kremlin feel that it must keep looking warily over the Chinese border. Those advantages had best be savored quietly.

Off to Central America

The numbing itinerary of the Kissinger commission in Central America - six countries in six days -- leaves little time for digesting information. Nonetheless it is a useful trip. The whirling voyage of the 12 commissioners contrasts with the passivity of U.S. diplomacy, which drifts with the same lack of choice and purpose that caused President Reagan to summon the aid of Henry Kissinger in July.

Not that this drift seems to disturb the Reagan administration. Central America, by its lights, seems "stable." Without committing combat troops, Washington has kept dominoes from tumbling. Its surrogates bog Nicara-gua down in a costly war and deny power to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador. Heading into an election, Mr. Reagan wants Central America to stay where it is — off the front burner.

But even a flying visit should demonstrate what is wrong with this policy, or lack of it. In the name of promoting respect for international law and frontiers, the United States is underwriting an illegal war against Nicaragua's Sandinists. The Kissinger team's itinerary provides for a landing at the same Managua airport that was bombed a few weeks ago by a plane supplied, it now appears, by the CIA. And in El Salvador the itinerant panel will be protected by the same security forces that menace the democratic cause that the commissioners aim to promote. So flagrant is the current rampage by rightist death squads that it provoked an angry denunciation by the State Department. With understandable despair, State blames the Salvadoran government for not curbing the terror, Surely the blame also extends to the blank-check aid by which North Americans dissipate their leverage.

Similarly confused was the denial of a visa to the Salvadoran opposition leader who, a month before, had been sought out by Mr. Reagan's personal envoy. The pretext for bar-ring Ruben Zamora was that he had condoned violence, although no one invoked that stan-dard against Roberto d'Aubnisson, the right-winger who spoke of "exterminating" leftists.

Word and deed are also at variance in Washington's response to the truce proposals of the Contadora mediators (Venezuela, Colombia, Mexico and Panama). The Reagan administration says it supports their effort, but it declines to say what realistic terms it expects to reach with leftist forces. Those terms will somehow have to square opposition to guerrillas who want to shoot their way into power in El Salvador with support for rebels who attempt to do the same in Nicaragua.

What most concerns Mr. Reagan in Central America? Hostile bases and foreign advisers? Democracy and respect for human rights? The sanctity of frontiers and non-intervention? The administration has managed the implausible: It can be quoted on both sides of every principle currently at stake in Central America. Its game is to yield nothing and let everyone guess what is meant by selective favors to rebels and governments, dictators and democrats, forces of law and of repression When his commission was formed Mr. Kissinger looked back wisely at the bitter years of debate over Vietnam. It was imperative, he said, to avoid "the same kind of uncertainty about objectives and about what was attainable that characterized so much of that period." Wise words for a valuable voyage.

Iran and the Strait of Hormuz business confidence. This the Chinese see as

If we are faced with any sort of misguided adventure endangering our vital interests, we will have to do something. Blocking the Strait [of Hormuz] will be the first step if we are forced to. As for international reaction, especially that of the United States, we think that the U.S. government should have learned by now that as far as Islamie Iran is concerned it has to think twice before it does anything.

We are not singling out France; for more than two years now we have been condemning the Soviet Union and other countries that have been fueling the war machine in Iraq. [President] Saddam Hussein's oppressive regime is about to collapse. But the Socialist govern-ment of France seems to be very foolish; it is irresponsibly and carelessly supplying a regime at a desperate stage of its life and therefore will bear a great part of the responsibility for any disaster.

- Ali-Akbar Velayati, foreign minister of Iran, in an interview in Newsweek.

British Silence on Hong Kong

All indications suggest that the present policy of silence about the course of negotiations between China and Britain on the future of Hong Kong is to be maintained on the British side. Despite the diplomatic blackout being adopted by the Foreign Office, the Chinese have not stopped presenting their case and even attacking Britain for adopting a colonial standpoint. What annoys Beijing is Britain's view that some links with Hong Kong should be maintained in the interim period after 1997, when the lease runs out, to keep relic of colonialism.

In the face of a constant Chinese barrage, there has been no really authoritative statement of the British case. The consequence has been to undermine business confidence, causing a run on the Hong Kong dollar and a slice in the stock exchange. It must be asked if our interests would be better served by reacting with firmness but with some indication of the British negotiating standpoint.

The Chinese talk much about how they want to see capitalism thrive when the colony passes under Chinese control. But they have not grasped the importance psychologically of naintaining business confidence.

One may well ask if the time is not coming when the negotiations should be entrusted to a specially appointed minister who should carry full weight by having access to Mrs. Thatcher The Chinese are likely to be more impressed and take greater note of the British government. Such a move might also do something to restore confidence in the colony, particularly if negotiations are destined to be long drawn out.

- The Daily Telegraph (London).

The communists have been applying a kind of psychological warfare, and it seems to be working in some quarters. Beijing's leaders have tried to undermine the residents' confidence in Britain's ability to remain in charge after 1997. So far neither London nor Hong Kong has been able to counter the barrage of propaganda. Because of Britain's self-imposed silence, many in Hong Kong have been persuaded that their future will be dictated according to Beijing's wishes alone.

Lebanon: Ignoring A Context

By Zbigniew Brzezinski

WASHINGTON — Five years after Camp David and one year after the Reagan plan, both of them high-water marks of constructive United States engagement on behalf of peace in the Middle East, America's Middle East policy is a shambles. Reacting to events tactically, the United States has been reduced to playing a subordinate role. Militarily it is acting as an auxiliary to the Lebanese Army, and politically as a proxy of Israeli foreign policy.

Tragically, perhaps for the first time uniformed Americans have been dying neither in defense of American national interest nor on behalf of any gemine American policy objectives.

The longer-term beneficiary of this disastrous turn of events is likely to be the Soviet Union.

In justifying what is happening, Secretary of State George Shultz has said, "The crisis in Lebanon cannot be isolated from the larger Middle East crisis ... Progress toward a peaceful solution in Lebanon will contribute to the broader peace process; setbacks in Lebanon will make the broader effort that much harder."

What was strikingly missing from that pronouncement was any ac-knowledgment of the critically important truth that the opposite connection is even more important: Lebanon cannot be restored without serious and tangible progress in the Arab-Israeli dispute. It was that dispute that destabilized Lebanon in the first place and produced the destruc-tive chain of events of the last year.

The central fact is that Lebanon, as a multi-ethnic and religious compromise, became unstuck as a consequence of the Arab-Israeli dispute.

First the large-scale influx of Pales-tinians into Lebanon upset the fragile balance between the Maronite Christians and the Moslems. The resulting strife then precipitated the entrance of the Syrians into Lebanon, in part to promote the Moslem cause and in larger part to restore Syrian domination that existed before the creation of the Lebanese entity under French rule. Finally, continued strife in Lebanon, the increased Syrian military presence and the use of Lebanon by the PLO for incursions against Israel precipitated the Israeli invasion last year, with its further destabilizing effect. The cumulative effect has been the collapse of the Lebanese compromise and the resulting civil strife. That strife cannot be undone by a political pastiche designed purely as a solution to the Lebanese problem. It is only a matter of time before the current cease-fire collapses. An en-during solution for Lebanon must somehow take into account the Palestinians' presence, which automatically intrudes the Arab-Israeli dispute into the Lebanese issue, and it must also deal satisfactorily with both Israel's and Syria's security problems.

It is difficult to imagine the Syrians acquiescing in a permanent solution for Lebanon that results in a pre-eminent Israeli role, including the de facto incorporation of southern Lebanon into Israel, and that at the same time leaves the Golan Heights permanently in Israeli hands.

In one way or another the future of ebanon is therefore linked organically to the Arab-Israeli dispute.

Indeed, it was because of the U.S. effort to resolve that dispute that Menachem Begin and Ariel Sharon quite deliberately sought to preoccu-py the United States with Lebanon. Diverting U.S. diplomatic efforts into Lebanon and involving the United States in a protracted diversionary crisis was the most effective way of derailing the Reagan plan for a Jor-danian-West Bank confederation. In addition, the more the United States became engaged in Lebanon, the more likely it was that eventually the United States would become a protagonist in the conflict, pitted more directly against the Palestin-ians and the Syrians.

And that is precisely what is now happening. The United States is on the brink of becoming plunged in military activity in Lebanon against the Palestinians and the Syrians.

The result of such involvement is likely to enhance the standing of Syria in the Arab world as the authentic voice of Arab nationalism. Even moderate Arab governments unsym-pathetic to Syria would find them-selves under popular pressures in the face of Syria's willingness to stand up to an America perceived by the Arabs as a military proxy of Israel.

Israel After Begin

A Frail Figure of Strong Influence

JERUSALEM — Despite his diminutive stature and frail health. Menachem Begin towered like a giant over the political life of Israel during his six turbulent years as prime minister. By the force of his personality he carried most of the public with him most of the time, whether he was making peace with Egypt or waging war in Lebanon. Israel today is a far different place from what it was on June 20, 1977, when Mr. Begin moved into the prime minister's office. The electorate has become more conservative. The people have become richer, although, paradoxically, the economy is mired in crisis. For the first-time, the nation is at peace with one of its Arab neighbors.

- Norman Kempster in the Los Angeles Times.

But Begin Has Left a Domestic Mess

JERUSALEM — Menachem Begin has left his successor more than an army mired in southern Lebanon and a virtually unbreakable grip on the occupied West Bank. He has left a domestic mess, the result of a national economic joyride that began in the pre-election-day politics of 1981. In the same month that be announced his resignation the bills began coming due. The shekel was devalued by 7.5 percent, and the government plunged into a painful round of cabinet negotiations aimed at cutting the budget and raising revenues by about $1 billion.

- Edward Walsh in The Washington Post.

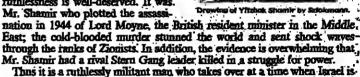

After 35 Years of Political Stability

WASHINGTON — Unless Yitzhak Shamir has political talents so far W kept well-hidden, it will not be long before 35 years of remarkable political stability in Israel comes to an end. Mr. Shamir has inherited a mess. Mr. Begin came to power by fashioning a coalition in the electorate of, European and Oriental Jews, voters with little in common except their attraction to him and their hostility to Labor. Without Mr. Begin, it is hard to see how this coalition can endure.

— Lawrence Meyer, author of "Israel Now: Portrait of a Troubled Land," writing in The Washington Post.

Backward Now . . .

WASHINGTON — Mr. Begin has been somewhat unfairly branded a "terrorist," a label fastened onto him by the outside world and by Labor Party stalwarts, includ-ing the redoubtable David Ben-Gurion. But Mr. Begin never took part in the nuts-and-bolts work of terrorism. He was always an organizer and politician. The same cannot be said for Mr. Shamir, whose reputation for ruthlessness is well-deserved. It was Mr. Shamir who plotted the assassi-

Thus it is a ruthlessly militant man who takes over at a time when Israel isdivided and needs a leader of moderation equipped with political and visionary gifts. When Mr. Begin resigned, Israel lost the one man who combined those qualities. What is left is Beginism without Begin, a bristling caretaker government, a shadow of the Begin legacy.

Amos Perlmutter, professor of political science
 American University, writing in the Los Angeles Times.

. or Forward Toward Compromise?

TEL AVIV — For better or for worse, Israel is losing its last authoritarian, leader from the generation of the founding fathers. As Menachem Begin steps down there remains a void, and most of the people stand to lose the feeling that "someone is up there" — someone fatherly and reliable, imbued with a deep sense of history and a keen feeling for danger, someone who, makes you feel secure. From now on Israelis will have to compromise on more mediocre leaders. They will, have to compromise on less farreaching ambitions. They will have to compromise on dealing with prob-lems that cannot be resolved by military force. When all is said and done, they might learn that the only way open to them at this stage is to com-promise with their Arab neighbors. In the long run, Mr. Begin's resignation might turn out to have been a turning point in the history of Israel. - Yoel Marcus, a columnist

Once Again, a Lethal Coup de Théâtre By Stephen F. Cohen had indeed been mistaken for an RC-135. Mar-

PRINCETON, New Jersey — Ever since the Cold War began with the birth of the Soviet Union, unexpected and mysterious incidents have periodically disrupted East-West relations just as they were improving. Some incidents were small intrigues, such as the forged "Zinoviev letter," published in 1924, which led to a break in British-Soviet diplomatic relations. Others have been large human tragedies, such as the destruction of Korean Air L assengers by a Soviet fighter plane on Sept. 1. Cold War II has witnessed other such incidents, each still partly unexplained. In May 1960 a summit meeting between Dwight Eisenhower and Nikita Khrushchev was abruptly canceled when an American U-2 spy plane was shot down over Sverdlovsk. ■ In September 1964 Mr. Khrushchev's plans to visit Bonn and establish diplomatic relations with the Federal Republic of Germany were suddenly aborted by a toxic gas attack on a West German diplomat in the Soviet Union.

■ In August 1979 ratification of the Salt-2 treaty by the U.S. Senate was fatally delayed by the "discovery" of a small Soviet brigade in Cuba that had probably been there since 1962. And now the Korean Air Lines tragedy has undermined recent improvements in American-Soviet relations, including the possibility of an early Reagan-Andropov summi The historical lesson, apart from the occasional role of anti-detente intriguers on both sides, is that impassioned Cold War conclusions acted upon immediately after such events, before the mystery unfolds, always turn out to be wrong.

Thus, the KAL incident quickly produced exceedingly dangerous political accusations and consequences in Washington and in Moscow. But we still do not know the full circumstances or causes of that tragedy. Neither the official American nor Soviet version is fully believable. Indeed, both governments are engaging in cover-ups, including concealment of much fuller recordings of the events than the 11-minute transcript disclosed by the United States.

What is Washington concealing? Newspapers have focused on the airliner. Why was it more than 300 miles off course and over Soviet strategic territory for two and a half hours? Was it there accidentally, as Washington claims; in conjunction with a spy mission, as Moscow charges, or to save fuel, as others think? The question is important — although insufficient. because not even proof of a spy mission explains

A more important question is rarely asked: How many American aircraft were in or near that Soviet airspace during the hours preceding the tragedy? The Reagan administration belately admitted the presence of one RC-135, which it says stayed well outside Soviet airspace and left long before the attack. Skepticism is warranted here, given the long history of American over-flights and the fact that one RC-135 role is to test

Soviet air defense on alert. Moreover, officials concede that RC-135s "routinely" fly 20 times a month. But the night of the incident was not routine: A Soviet missile test had been scheduled. Did several RC-135s, as another source reports, therefore move into the general vicinity during a period of several hours?

The Reagan administration insists that it is blameless because Soviet air defenders could not have confused the South Korean 747 jumbo jet with a smaller RC-135. But that is the most plausible explanation of what happened, espe-cially if several RC-135s were involved. Everything we know about the Soviet air-defense operation indicates incotitude and confusion from beginning to end. Everything suggests that Soviet military authorities thought they were attacking an RC-135, not a 747 jumbo jet on an illicit mission. If so, the United States contributed to the confusion and thus to the tragedy itself. Indeed, an RC-135 in the area may have over-heard flight 007's plight and failed to warn it.

The Soviet Union seems to be covering up the same explanation, even though it would diminish Soviet responsibility for the tragedy. Until Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov, chief of the general staff, laid down the definitive offical version at his press conference on Sept. 9, several Soviet statements implied that the South Korean plane

The writer is professor of politics at Princeton and writes a monthly column for The Nation.

shal Ogadov emphatically rejected that explanation, insisting that the Soviet defense system had operated flawlessly and that the attack on flight 007 "was not done by mistake."

Instead he rested the entire Soviet case on spy charges against the commercial airliner, a callous justification that politically damaged the Soviet Union abroad as much as did the incident. In chose to appear evil rather than incompetent.

That bizarre cover-up, designed by the mili-tary to preserve its image of infallibility, reflects a major conflict between Soviet political and military leaders. The KAL incident was an enormous blow to Yuri Andropov's leadership. It undermined his "peace campaign" to keep

American missiles out of Europe, stalled his economic reforms announced in July and damaged his personal authority, as evidenced by two precedented developments: ■ The Soviet military, and not the Politburo, took charge of public relations, as dramatized by Marshal Ogarkov's extraordinary press confer-ence. (Soon after it, Mr. Andropov's men began circulating indirect complaints about the military's "inaccuracies.")

Mr. Andropov disappeared; making his first ablic comment 27 days after the incident when he finally endorsed the military's cover-up. (His statement indicated that the entire affair had undercut his argument — against Soviet hard-liners — that better relations with the Reagan administration were still possible. Such "Illusions," he lamented, had been "dispelled.")

If the cover-ups in Moscow and Washington persist, flight 007 will remain another partial mystery in Cold War history. But one lesson is clear. The tragedy has shattered the myth of infallible military-technological safeguards that is so essential to the lobbies on both sides that oppose arms control. For if Soviet radar cannot tell a jumbo jet from an RC-135 in two and a half hours, will it be able to distinguish between a Pershing-2 and an errant seaguil in six minutes?

A Neutrality of Reason

Sometimes art and artfulness im-peril life. In the international arena, the volleys of accusations over KAL 007 still echo; and the third and present act is entitled Retribution. On stage, Mr. Reagan and Mrs. Thatcher; costumed as demagogues, warn of Soviet devilry; the Greek chorus in Congress vice to be heard at a loud anti-Soviet pitch. Offstage, prejudice fortifies suspicion and threatens to deteriorate into hatred.

So it is even more critical that we retain a neutrality of reason. We must be wary of East-West partisanship and the tawdry form of patriotism the gesticulating defense-spending version — that puts international di-plomacy on a football field at which spectators and players of all nations are polarized into opposed camps and "firm response" is a exphemism for squaring off. The current sentiments of President-Reagan and his entourage stoke diplomatic, econom-ic and social hostilities and thus the Russian siege mentality.

The preoccupation of the superpowers is with preparations for war rather than with safeguarding global peace. The two concerns do not co-incide. Combative and unnecessary gestures are being made under the guise of necessary vigilance. We can avoid the spring of 1914, when the worlds's peace was at the mercy of an accident, by not permitting partiality to pre-empt our informed dispassion. ANDREW KOPS.

Pretoria and Namibia

I see that Henry Bienen (in "There Are Other Ways to Help Africans," IHT, Aug. 8) has argued that the United States, and by inference the Western world, should use only "international trade and commerce" to solve the problems of Namibia.

The advice seems naive, It would appear self-evident that a terrorist conflict such as that going on in Namibia can be settled in no way except militarily or through heavy political pressure from many states, which does not seem possible in this case given the present state of affairs in the United Nations.

Professor Bienen states that "South Africa may not agree to an independent Namibis in any case." In this, as in other unlikely assump-tions, he is unconvincing. South Africa could hardly disavow, at this late date, its pledges of independence for Nambia and for troop withdrawal. which it has repeatedly made to the United States and the Western world.

NEW YORK - Shadowy rumors of a woman's daily paper in China have floated through women's publications in America for several years, but it was left for Li-Sum-Ling to declare that there were dozens of them, not one. There are four women's daily papers in Canton," said he, "five or six in Shanghai, and the same proportionately in every large city in China. These papers are all run by Chinese women, and women do all the work on them." "All this is not new, you must understand," said the visitor. "Female education fell into neglect, and now it is being resumed, that's all. It is necessary for the women to be educated if a country is to advance."

1933: A Shower of Meteors PARIS — Still puzzled as to the origin of the meteoric shower observed [on Oct. 9] by thousands over a huge area from Belgium to Spain, Paris astronomers were reluctant to give a scientific explanation of the brilliant display until they have had time to study it carefully. Paris saw the celestial fireworks when shooting stars appeared suddenly all through the heavens and continued to flare up and fade in a general west-east direction. Observers counted as many as 75 per minute, More than 10,000 meteors were counted at the Paris observatory. The Antwerp Astronomical Society said it found the starting point of the shower in the head of the Dragon constellation.

An Unusual Co-Presidency That Raises Questions WASHINGTON — A curious shift in the power relationship has taken place between the presi-dent and Congress. It is working to the benefit of President Reagan and the speaker of the House, Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. What is not so certain is how well it is serving U.S. interests. To oversimplify a vastly more complex personal and political story, Tip O'Neill and Ronald Reagan have sized each other up, acknowledged each other's power and defined a relationship of mutual respect that allows each of them room to do his own political business without foreclosing cooperation on other issues. If that sounds like the definition of a mature, productive and healthy relationship, it is. But it was achieved only through pain and strife, and it may or may not work out for the best. It is certainly a change. In 1981 Mr. Reagan went out of his way to humiliate Speaker O'Neill, riding roughshod over him time and again on the floor of the House and proving that there were many Democratic representatives who were far more responsive to Mr. Reagan's grassroots appeal than to Mr. O'Neill's feeble efforts to invoke loyalty. In 1982 Mr. O'Neill had his revenge, letting Mr. Reagan twist on the rack of recession and beating By David S. Broder

with the antumn leaves. Accommodation is the order of the day, and Congress is actually processing the At the beginning of this year each man knew that he held veto power over the other's legislative agenda. The process of mutual acknowledgment began with the Social Security deal, in which Mr. Reagan made large substantive concessions in return for Mr. O'Neill giving up an issue that was bedeviling the White House and the Republicans. The tentative partnership foundered on differences over military spending, Central American policy, taxes and deficits. But it revived strongly in the last month when Mr. O'Neill endorsed Mr. Reagan's handling of the South Korean plane incident and put his prestige on the line by supporting Mr, Reagan's continued use of the marines in Lebanon. Frequent photographs of Mr. Rea-gan signing bills with leading Democrais applauding in the background attest to the new dictum: Where the speaker and president agree, progress is possible; where they differ, the legation will be put aside.

Under this general and unstated pact, the long-threatened veto battle over appropriations is disappearing Congress is actually processing the money bills faster than it has in years. Representative O'Neill is plainly reveling in his new status as "copresident" on some issues. "The speaker is enjoying sharing power with the president," says Representa-tive Martin Frost, a Texas Democrat and junior member of Mr. O'Neill's leadership circle. "He's enjoying power, and he's exercising power."

It is hardly a coincidence that col-leagues find Mr. O'Neill more "vis-cerally assertive," as one of them put it, than at any time since he took over in 1977. Not only did he challenge the sensibilities of many in his party on the marines in Lebanon issue, he has thrown his weight around on many less-publicized matters, like the appropriations bills, in a way that saddenly makes him look like the 800-pound gorilla of Capitol Hill. The change has been noticed in many places, notably in the Senate Democratic and House Republican leadership, whose members are understandably not overjoyed at the cozy little arrangement between Mr. O'Neill and Mr. Reagan. More serious are the constraints placed on this partnership by the fundamental po-litical conflict between the two men. Both have their eyes on the 1984 election. The president hopes for a victory that will "let Reagan be Reagan" for four years, uninhibited by the likes of Tip O'Neill. Mr. O'Neill believes the Democrats can rout Mr. Reagan and the Republicans, gain strength in Congress and install a new president who shares Mr. O'Neill's traditional liberal Demo-Cratic economic and social goals.

Neither man wants to take the responsibility — or expose his party to the pre-election risks - of taking the painful steps on taxes, entitlements and military spending that would be necessary to reduce the horrendons budget deficits. So the U.S. government goes on risking the world economy by failing to pay its own bills. Mr. Reagan and Mr. O'Neill do not trust each other on the complex constituency politics of the immigration issue. So the United States government continues to be unable to control its own borders. The Reagan-O'Neill team may be better than nothing as an interim device. But, as these examples indicate, it is a long way from providing a government capable of meeting its fundamental responsibilities. The Washington Post.

Motorcycle Boy is a born leader, a Dr. Eduardo Platr (Richard Gere), heroic veteran of gang warfare; Rusty James thinks he's a nobody. The film is shot mostly in black and white. According to Janet Masim of The New York Times, the film "exerts more than a little fascination even at its most absurd" but it is so furiously overloaded, so crammed with extravagant touches, that any hint of a central thread is obscured."

Sean Connery returns in the new Bond film "Never Say Never Again" directed by Irvin Kershner. This time Bond, after a lifetime of high living, is taking a health cure. The villain of the film is Largo (Klaus Maria Brandauer) who plans to hijack two U.S. cruise missiles and hold them for ransom. Janet Maslin of The New York Times says the film "has noticeably more humor and character than the Bond films usually provide." Gary Arnold of The Washington Post calls it "one of the best James Bond adventure thrillers ever made."

Vincent Canby writes "The Honorary Consul' is a much more complicated, mysterious work than one might suspect from this rather literal if quite faithful condensation."

In Lawrence Kasdan's new comedy, "The Big Chill," seven people meet at a small Baptist church in the South for the funeral of a comrade who has committed suicide. The film explores how their lives have changed since they were at university together in the 1960s. The main characters in the film include William Hurt and Meg Tilly. 'Rienzi': Wagner and Mussolini By Henry Pleasants

International Herald Tribune ONDON - The English Naational Opera's new production of "Rienzi" promised welcome opportunity to make the acquaintance of a Wagner opera more often written and read about than heard. There had not been a professional production in London in about 70

The problem with "Rienzi," first produced in Dresden in 1842, is three-fold: its length (uncut, it would run to somewhere between five and six hours); a score suggest-ing little of the original genius that would surface so brilliantly and decisively just a few months later in

"The Flying Dutchman," and a scenario calling for spectacular and inevitably expensive pageantry (in-deed, the center of Wagner's plan is not the ill-starred "last of the tribunes," but the fickle Roman populace).

All of which made "Rienzi" an odd choice for the inauguration of a three-year series of offbeat operas to be put on cheaply for a single run of 10 or so performances. "Ri-enzi," as Wagner conceived it, cannot be produced on the cheap.

Following Fitzgerald's Trail in Paris Hytner and Fielding have evaded, if not solved, those parts of the problem posed by the length of the opera and the quality of the music more, wouldn't have worn himself out so much and wouldn't have died so young."

The final quarter of the year accounts make the most of what Wagner and the producer have given them.

Hans von Bulow is said to have characterized "Rienzi" as "Meyerbeer's greatest opera." This Rienzi is certainly not Meyerbeerian, and just as certainly it is not even Wagnerian. But it is, in its own curious, hlock-busting way, a success. Opening night was greeted with much applause and a few scattered boos. About par, these days, for the course.

Further performances of "Rienn": Oct. 12, 14, 18, 21, 26 and 28.

The Royal Opera's first new pro duction of the season was an odd and, on the whole, delightful pair-ing of Stravinsky's "The Nightin-gale" and Ravel's "L'Enfant et les sortilèges," the first not heard in the house since 1919, the latter beard there for the first time.

"Heard" is not quite the right word for these productions, both by John Dexter, with David Hockney as his designer, and both originally conceived for New York's Met. Both combined song and orchestra with ballet and pantomime, the singers, with some exceptions most notably Ann Murray as the child in Ravel's little opera, visibly banked in the wings.

"The Nightingale" was treated largely as ballet, with the nightingale and the fisherman danced enchantingly by Natalia Makarova and Anthony Dowell (as they were in New York) in a choreography by Sir Frederick Ashton. "L'Enfant et les sortilèges" was largely pantomime, with animals and furniture ingeniously conjured out of a : child's building blocks against a background of Hockney's garishly colored child's paintbox daubs.

As with "Rienzi" it was a producer's evening, with much critical and audience applause for what Dexter and Hockney had done, and with some questioning about whether what had been done was what should have been done.

Several London newspapers had reviews by both music and dance critics. In one of them the music critic's notice appeared under the heading "Too Many Dancers," and the dance critic's under the heading "Too Many Singers," Which was probably getting it about right:

Weather Disrupted Harvest of Grain In Soviet Union During Past Month

MOSCOW — Bad weather has severely disrupted the closing stages of the Soviet grain harvest and Western farm experts said Monday that the overall crop total could be affected.

Official reports have shown that after good progress throughout the summer, the pace of harvesting slowed sharply during the past month and is now well behind last year's levels.

Western agricultural experts in Moscow said the chief reason was continuous heavy rainfall in three important growing areas which are always cleared at the end of the season — northern and eastern Kazakhstan and western Siberia.

The Soviet grain

harvest, which was expected to be the best in five years, may not reach predicted levels

owing to heavy rains.

Normally all Soviet grain har-vesting is completed by mid-Octo-ber but this year there are still several million bectares waiting to

The experts said the delay in getting machinery into the fields was likely to mean at the very least a reduction in crop quality and added there was a serious danger of much greater harm.

"At this time of year there is a great risk of frosts or heavy snow in these areas. If that happens in the coming days a large proportion of the crop there will probably be The Soviet Union was expected to bring in its best harvest for five years this season and the U.S. Department of Agriculture had estimated the crop at about 220 million tons. This calculation was based partly on the rate of harvesting in the summer months, and the Western experts said the problems in Siberia and Kazakhstan, a vast southern republic, could lead to a revision of the expected total.

Although the affected areas are not the most productive in the country, significant losses through rain or snow damage would certainly put the 220-million ton figure out of reach, one analyst said.

He said that this in turn could be expected to increase Soviet purchase requirements in the United States and other Western grain markets. Predictions for other crops are generally brighter, according to Western diplomats.

They said the cotton harvest appeared set to exceed the 10.2 million tons harvested last year, but cautioned that this would depend on continuing good weather in the central Asian growing areas. Last year's crop was reduced and its quality severely affected by heavy rains in mid-October. Root crops are also reported to be doing well this year, The Communist Party newspaper Pravda said Monday that so much sugar beet had been parvested that 15.4 million tons were rotting in the fields because transport was overstretched.

Western diplomats also said that autumn sowing had been making good progress in September and early October thanks to ideal weather conditions in the European parts of the Soviet Union.

They added that very heavy rainfall over the past few days in European Russia was likely to have slowed down the pace of work but that it was too early to assess the extent of any delays.

Australian Diamond-Mining Venture

PERTH, Australia - The Western Australia state government Monday approved a mining venture expected to produce one third of the world's diamonds.

The project, based on a vast pipe of diamonds uncovered in a remote region 1200 miles (2,000 kilomters) north of Perth, is to produce 25 million carais of mostly industrial diamonds annually from early 1986. This would represent at least one third of world output by weight. But with most of the diamonds suitable only for use by industry, the project will account for only about 4 percent of world production by

Five percent of output is expected to be in gems, 40 percent in cheap gems and 55 percent in industrial diamonds used for cutting and

The official go-ahead followed months of negotiations with the partners in the venture led by CRA Ltd., a subsidiary of Britain's Rio Tinto-Zine Corp. with a 56.8 percent stake, and Ashton Mining, with 38.2

The Western Australia government, expected to receive about 12 million Australian dollars ($10 million) a year in royalties from the project, holds the remaining 5 percent.

The government said it had acquired the stake by purchasing Northern Mining Corp. from Bond Corp Holdings for 42 million dollars.

Nearly all the diamonds will be marketed by South Africa's de Beers cartel, the Central Sciling Organization, with some 5 percent to be sold through Aralanian Frères of Belgium.

The cost of putting the pipe into production will be 300 million dollars.

Murdoch Is Wagering on Satellite TV

Media Baron Bets on Alternative To Cable Systems in Europe, U.S.

By Michael Schrage Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON - Hurtling about 22,300 miles over Rupert Murdoch's head are a pair of satellites that he is betting will transform him from just an international press baron to an international press baron who also is a multinational television tycoon. One satellite is poised to beam programming across Europe and into England; the other will broadcast across the United States.

This space-based bid to become a multimedia monarch is one of the costliest gambles Mr. Murdoch has undertaken. Should it succeed, the entrepreneurial Australian will have managed to turn his billion-dollar News Corporation Ltd. into one of the most profitable mass-media companies in the world. If it fails, as many observers privately predict it will, Mr. Murdoch could be in for the biggest debacle of his career.

"What it's going to look like is either a bloody battlefield with a lot of red ink strewn around or a brilliant success," Mr. Murdoch said. "The upside is enormous. It's well worth the risk, but I would be the first to say that it will take three or four years to pay off."

Low-key, relaxed and not appearing to have the nervous demeanor often described by friends and employees, Mr. Murdoch ontlined his satellite television plans for Europe and the United States in a rare interview at his office at the New York Post. In an accent wavering somewhere between Australian and British, be said that he expects his U.S. satellite pay-television network to gross close to $325 million a year by the end of 1986.

With a newspaper empire that spans three continents, Mr. Murdoch is arguably one of the most powerful publishers in the world, with papers that are remarkably diverse. He owns the prestigious, but money-losing, Times of London as well as England's best-selling daily, The Sun, a racy tabloid that's better known for uncovering cleavage than for covering the news. He also owns a number of papers in Australia as well as in the United States, including the New York Post, the Boston Herald and the Village Voice.

Many of his newspapers breed controversy because they are seen as pandering to the public instead of informing it. His New York competition—The New York Times and the Daily News—make little effort to conceal their contempt for Mr. Murdoch and his New York Post, a tabloid with a reputation for sensationalism.

While many in the establishment media find that brand of journalism reprehensible, the public gobbles it up. Circulation inevitably rises under his ownership. He appears to have a knack for turning troubled newspapers around, although several of his papers, including the Post, remain money losers. Still, his News Corporation Ltd. raked in profit of $81.6 million in the year ended June 30 on revenue of $1.4 billion. That represents a 133-percent profit increase from a year earlier.

Now Mr. Murdoch wants to bring his media expertise to the new technologies. "I think all media are related," he said. "All the skills involved are related. Putting together a newspaper that appeals to the public's taste is not all that different from putting together a programming schedule for a television network.

Bill to Let Banks Enter New Businesses

By James L. Rowe. Jr. Washington Post Service

HONOLULU - The chairman of the Senate Banking Committee said that he plans to introduce a bill by the end of the month that would give banks broad powers to enter

Senator Jake Garn, Republican of Utah, said his bill would give banks the authority to set up money-market mutual funds in a separate subsidiary and probably would permit them to engage in a variety of real estate activities as well.

Mr. Garn, speaking to reporters after an address Sunday to the annual meeting of the American Bankers Association here, said his bill would replace one proposed last summer by the Reagan administration. That bill - which would give bank companies the authority to enter the insurance business generally is considered unlikely to

The administration bill has been strongly opposed by insurance agents, who feel that they would be put out of business if banks were permitted to underwrite and sell all forms of insurance.

He said one of the reasons the administration's Volcker asks U.S. banks to back bill is given little chance is that it is too narrowly focused on banks.

He said that ideally he would like to take his bill to the Senate floor by next summer. Representative Fernand St Germain, a Democrat of Rhode Island and chairman of the House Banking Committee, is more reluctant to write new bank legislation in the current session of

French Steel Firms Said to Ask to Cut 10,000 More Jobs

By Tom Gilroy

PARIS - France's two deficitridden steel groups, Usinor and Sa-cilor, must cut 10,000 to 12,000 jobs beyond staffing reductions already planned if they are to have any chance of returning to profit-ability, industry sources said Mon-

They said senior steel officials had told the government of the need for the additional cuts, which would affect mainly the depressed industrial regions of the north and

They would almost certainly provoke a strong reaction from trade unions that already are dis-pleased with the Socialist government's steel policies.

The proposed cuts would about double the 12,000 layoffs called for in the government's 1982-86 steel plan, which itself failed to mention about 4,000 layoffs approved re-cently as part of a rescue plan for Creusot-Loire, a privately-held industrial group.

And while the plan spread the cuts over five years, proponents of the additional layoffs, who include Usinor's chairman, Raymond Lévy, want them to happen as quickly as possible, said one industry source.

Usinor and Sacilor had a com-bined loss of 8.6 billion francs ($1.1 billion) in 1982 and steel industry sources have said it could reach 10 billion francs this year.

EC Steel Industry Loses More Jobs

The Associated Press

BRUSSELS — Employment in the Enropean Community's steel industry dropped by 20,000 in the first half of 1983, continuing a de-cade-long decline, the EC reported Monday Monday.

There were 493,000 steelworkers in the 10 EC member countries at the end of June, compared to 513,000 when the year began. Since 1974, nearly 300,000 steet jobs have disappeared in the community.

The countries most affected this year have been Britain and West Germany. Britain lost 6,000 jobs, or about 8 percent of the steel work force, while 8,000 jobs, or 5 percent of the work force, were dropped in West Germany. France lost 2,500 workers and Luxembourg 450. about 3 percent of their work forces. Reductions in other countries amounted to less than I per-

The rally, which came in slow Columbus Day holiday trading, overshadowed the stunning selloff in Comdisco and stocks of some Texas banks.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly eight points at the outset, climbed 12.50 to a record 1,284.65, topping the previous record set Friday of 1,272.15. The Dow has spurted 53.35 points in the past five sessions and 507.73 since the bull market began Aug. 13, 1982,

Canada Offers $500-Million, 5-Year Bond

Renters
LONDON — Canada has offerred a $500-million, five-year Eurobond priced at par with a 10%-percent coupon, Deutsche Bank, one of the three lead managers, said Monday.

Bond market sources said that the issue, which is noncallable, appeared to have been well received, even though the coupon was % of a percentage point below the rate that had been rumored last week when talk of a Canadian issue circulated in the market.

Market sources had also speculated that the issue would be only $300 million to $400

The other lead managers are Credit Suisse First Boston Ltd. and Orion Royal Bank Ltd. Canada last tapped the market in the spring of 1982, with the sale of a 14%-percent Eurobond due in 1987. That issue

The market took off following a report that Wharton Econometrics third consective session in a rally had predicted the economic recov-led by oils, IBM, General Motors cry would last two more years with a' relatively low inflation rate be-fore the United States encountered another recession.

Long-depressed oil stocks scored big gains amid mounting concern over the lengthy Iran-Iraq war. Iran has threatened to cut off oil supplies to the West.

Some early profit-taking was triggered by the Federal Reserve's report late Friday of an unexpected $600-million increase in the narrowest measure of the U.S. money supply. But brokers said growth rate remained within Fed target ranges, which bolstered hopes for lower interest rates.

Comdisco was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 144 to 24. A Barron's magazine article said Comdisco might encounter ac-counting problems with the IRS and said the company was faced with stiff new competition. Comdisco officials strongly disagreed with the article.

American Telephone & Tele-graph was the second most active issue, up ¼ to 64%. Greybound was third, up 1½ to 23%.
Atlantic Richfield was fourth on the list, up 31/4 to 48. Gulf Oil gained 1 to 45%, Exxon 11/4 to 381/4, California Standard 11/4 to 361/4, Ohio Standard 2¼ to 53¾, Indiana Standard 2% to 50, Mobil 11/2 to 31½, Phillips Petroleum 2½ to 35½, Texaco 1¼ to 37½ and Occidental Petroleum 1 to 251/2.

If Skyband works, it will add 50 percent to earnings, "and we'll be making between $25 million to $30 million a month at the end of three years," he saids. "If it doesn't, we'll have one very bad year where we'll run for our lives."

The odds are not with Mr. Murdoch. Even though be has an agree-ment with MACom to build the satellite dishes, it is still far from certain that enough can be produced in time for an early roll-out next year. Mr. Murdoch's assertion that he can price the dishes at $325 is unproved. What's more, the logistics of distributing and installing the dishes are still undetermined, but Mr. Murdoch says those arments will be disclosed short-

"We've never been able to convince ourselves that there's a business in the stand-alone directbroadcast-satellite business," said Frank Biondi, who heads Time's HBO. "We have grave doubts about servicing the ground components. People are vastly underestimating the costs of installing and maintaining the dishes."

He declined to rule it oot, though. He also declined to speculate on Mr. Murdoch's chances, only saying that "Rupert seems to operate on a higher risk-reward ratio than we do - but I admire the man for the risks he's taking,"

Of course, Mr. Biondi has prewhat Mr. Murdoch really needs to make his service go: programming. HBO totally dominates the pay-television market, and Mr. Murdoch probably would like nothing better than to put HBO on his network. Mr. Biondi, though, said he's not going to get it, and so Mr. Murdoch will have to negotiate with Hollywood to get the movies subscribers.

"The Hollywood studios have an enormous vested interest in seeins us be successful," Mr. Murdoch said. "They are today in the hands of HBO. Hollywood is going to be mally hopes to use the combined owned by Time Inc. unless they support other people, and they've got to make their programming available to us."

Competition Stiffening in Britain's Home-Computer Market

By Barnaby J. Feder New York Times Service

LONDON —Clive and the Beeb packed them in at the Barbican Exhibition Hall here last month. They're not a New Wave rock

They are Sir Clive Sinclair, the recently knighted inventor who brought the cut-price personal computer to Britain, and the Brit-ish Broadcasting Corp., which the government has used as a wedge to push computing into Britain's homes and schools. The occasion was the annual microcomputer show, said by its organizers to be Europe's largest. Britain today has more installed small computers per inhabitant than any other nation, according to industry figures. Personal comput-ers used primarily in business, such as International Business Machines' PC or Victor Technologies' Sirius, have sold better in Britain than elsewhere in Europe. But it is home computers, loosely defined as those selling for less than £1000 (about $1,500), that have really caught Britain's fancy.

"For once, we are the world's most advanced products less "said most advanced marketplace," said Stewart Binnie, merchandise con-troller for W.H. Smith & Son, the pookstore chain that has become Britain's leading microcomputer retailer. "The level of interest is remarkable. I haven't seen anything like it on trips to the United States and the Far East."

Though good numbers are far harder to come by here than in the United States, the Acom BBCII is said to have about 30 percent of the home computer market. Commohind with 19 percent.

So far, that demand has remained strong even though Britain has not seen price-cutting on the scale that has ravaged the microcomputer market in the United States. A number of U.S. producers have been cutting prices steadily in the past year, led by Texas Instru-ments, but their prices are still much higher here than in the United States. Commodore, for example, recently slashed the price on its 64 model from the equivalent of about $525 to just under $345. But that is still far above the $200 or so

U.K., Ireland Plan To Build Gas Pipeline

The Associated Press

LONDON - Britain and the Republic of Ireland agreed Mon-day to build a 160-mile natural gas pipeline from Dublin to Belfast in Northern Ireland and then on to the industrial city of Londonderry in Northern Ireland.

Meanwhile, in Copenhagen, a total of 32 companies from the Unit-ed States, Canada, Denmark, Italy, Finland, and Sweden tendered ap-plications for licenses to explore for oil or gas in Denmark, the Ministry of Energy announced Monday.

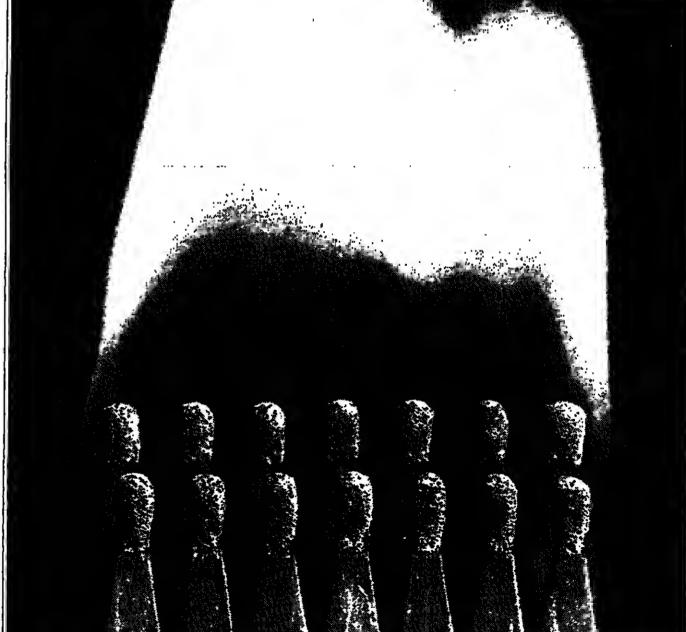

Most of the companies were joining together in various groups to make their bids, but the ministry declined to identify the groups the blocks for which they applied.

Under the British-Irish agreement, signed in Belfast, the British government will spend about £149 million ($225 million) to build the pipeline from the border of Northem and southern Ireland south to Dublin and north to Londonderry, and also will contribute $7.5 million to help construct the Irish Re-public's 50-mile (80-kilometer) part of the pipeline from Dublin to the northern border.

The new pipeline would then link up with an existing pipeline serving the Irish Republic. The total line would then stretch about

The new project is expected to create several hundred construction jobs and save 1,000 jobs in Northern Ireland's gas industry.

In Copenhagen, the last applica-tions for oil exploration came in just before the deadline for the first licensing round involving 500 blocks covering 28.5 square miles of Danish land and sea territory.

MY LAST SIGH

By Luis Buñuel. Translated by Abagail Israel. Illustrated. 256 pp. $15.95. Knopf, 201 East 50th St., New York, N.Y.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

THERE'S something reassuring in reading I the autobiography of a man or woman who had a wonderful life. Well then, you say to yourself, perhaps wonderful lives are still possible. There's zest even yet in the world.

Of course, the life described in "My Last Sigh," Luis Bunnel's autobiography, began 83 years ago and ended with his death last July. He himself writes in a tone of nostalgia, as if he felt that wonderful lives went out with his generation and that those who come after him will have to find new definitions of satisfaction or self-realization

In his last years, Bunuel, Spain's most fam-ous filmmaker, complains of losing his memory — but be had so much to remember. Be-sides, it makes his book move from image to image, like his films. It may surprise some readers to discover how intuitive and non-intellectualized many of those films were.

In the town of Calandra where he was born, Buriuel writes, the middle ages lasted until
World War I. He remembers a group of boys running through the streets at dawn singing "The Song of Sunrise" to wake the workers. The constant presence of death and religion, be observes, gave him a strong joie de vivre. In his films, he opposed his positive impulse to "a climate of insecurity and imminent disaster an atmosphere we all recognize."

He began his career with two Surrealist films: "Un Chien Andalou" and "L'Age d'Or." When the first achieved a succes d'estime in Paris, Bunuel was summoned to a Surrealist tribunal headed by the humorless André Breton, who demanded to know whether the fact of the film's appeal was not a violation of Surrealist principles. Bunuel describes Beton as "forever kissing women's hands" — an unconscious Surrealist act, perhaps — and growing furious at Leon Trotsky because the exiled revolutionary was fond of his dog and con-tended it had "a human look."

Uninterested in politics, the author nevertheless joined the Republican forces during the Spanish Civil War. He lost some of his enthusiasm for the struggle when he found the anarchists "decreeing" free love in Calandra, much to the confusion of the townspeople. While the Fascist forces advanced, he says, the Republican army leaders debated issues. One of his jobs was the launching of balloons filled with political tracts.

Buffuel knew just about everyone and gives us his candid assessments of them. Though Federico Garcia Lorca was "charming and irresistible," his plays were "ornste and bom-bastic." Picasso was friendly and lively, yet selfish and egocentric. Buffuel found Picasso's "Guernica" mural "grandiloquent." Salvador Dali is represented as brilliant but narcissistic and unreliable. The philosopher Miguel de Unamuno is "pedantic and humorless." Jorge

Luis Borges appeared to be "very pretentious and self-absorbed."

Some of these judgments reflect Bunuel's surprising simplicity, which was both a virtue and a defect in his work. Many of the symbols in his films, for example, symbols that critics made much of, seem to have been listed for Buffuel's dreams or his life without passing through a process of conscions evaluation.

Judging by his account, he operated intuitively and often used an image simply because he liked it, or because someone had suggested it.

When he saw his first movies in the early part of this century, Bulluel says, the form was so new and unusual that "most spectators had difficulty understanding what was happen-ing." They had to be helped by an explicator, or narrator, who stood beside the pisno. In his own films, the author tried to return that feeling of unusualness, and in this sense at least he almost always succeeded. Here in "My Last Sigh," he is interested in a less ambiguous kind of contact, gathering his remaining friends around him and gladly tuming his back on desire. For the moving picture of his own life, he's a grand explicator.

LONDON — Britannia Arrow Holdings said Monday that subunderwriting is now in progress for a one-for-four rights issue at 75 pence ($1.13) a share, to raise about £21.8 million.

The company plans a final divi-dend of 1.2 pence a share on the increased capital for 1983, for a total of 2.2 pence. This represents an increase of 29.4 percent. The financing will involve the issuance of 30.4 million new ordinary in the majors. Perhaps the best trade the Orioles made was the one engineered by Hank Peters, the general manager, with the Yankees on June 15, 1976. That 10-player swap brought the Orioles three players who form part of their oucleus - Scott McGregor, their No. 1 starting pitcher, who will start the first game of the World Series; Tippy Martinez, their No. 1 relief pitcher; and Rick Dempsey, their No. 1 catcher, whose guity, aggressive-play epitomizes the solid defense that has served as a hallmark of their success. Kansas City went ahead 20-14 "That was one of the great steals of all time," Martinez said of the 1976 trade. "I don't know how the Orioles did it." Some baseball people wonder how the Orioles develop winning

Owens Has 'As Good a Team On the Bench as on the Field'

New York Times Service

By Joseph Durso

NEW YORK - The Philadelphia Phillies are like an orchestra: everybody gets into the act. The 25 players blend. Except for Mike Schmidt and Al Holland, there are few solos.

Their manager, Paul Owens, says they're also like another institution; the Baltimore Orioles.

"The Orioles have been doing it for years," Owens says. "Earl Weaver had roles for everybody and the players knew what their roles were. It's still true of the Orioles. Now it's true of the Phillies. "When I took over as manager, 1 had to convince them it would take everybody to win. Don't forget, this is a team with a lot of older etars, and they resented it. They didn't want to sit down while some kids took their places. Pete Rose resented it, Joe Morgan resented it. But, when they saw what was happening, they accepted it.

"Now I look around and I've got as good a team on the bench as on Owens took over the Phillies on July 18 under strange circumstances: the Phillies were in first place in the National League East and Owens was the general manag-er, a position he has held for 11 seasons. But the team also had the oldest lineup in baseball, and one of the most expensive, and it was only one game over the .500 mark. So Bill Giles, the president, decided to make an immediate ehange in the hope of making an immediate run for the pennant. He dismissed Pat Corrales as manager and replaced him with the 59-year-What happened was that the Phillies, after some public grousing over the daily lineup juggling, won 11 straight games in September, and 21 of their last 25. They knocked off Montreal, eliminated the defending champion, St. Louis, and won the Eastern title by six games over Pittsburgh, with a record of 90-72 They had two decisive strengths, in addition to Schmidt and his 40 home runs: They won 50 of 81 games at home, the most in the league. And they had a rebuilt bullpen led by Holland, who was acquired from San Francisco and saved or won 33 games, and Willie Hernandez, who came from the Chicago Cubs and saved or won 17. Bobby Valentine, the third-base coach for the New York Mets, watched the Phillies win the league playoff against Los Angeles. You wouldn't fear the Phillies going into the series," he said, "They don't have great speed or great power. But they do have the weapon of the Orioles; versatility." "Another thing: no designated hitter in this World Series. So the Orioles can't use Kenny Singleton in that role. They'll be forced to find new solutions." As for the Phillies' advanced age —four players are 40 or older, two others pushing 40 — Valentine agrees with most baseball people: "Age? They've come this far. They only have one more week to go." Besides being old, the Phillies are transformed.

They began with a blockbuster trade last winter. They sent five players to Cleveland for Von Haves, who suffered injuries and slumps and eventually played his way ont of the right-field job.

But they also got Morgan from San Francisco; Holland, Joe Lefebvre and Sixto Lezcano from San Diego: Kiko Garcia from Houston; Larry Andersen from Seattle; and Charles Hudson and Kevin Gross from their own farm system.

The most significant result was a boost for the pitching staff, which looked absolutely scattered at the start of the season. Steve Carlton remained the anchor and won 15 games in his 18th season. John Denny, acquired from Cleveland late last season, became a devotee of Carlton's martial-arts program, and became a tiger: he was 19-6, with an earned run average of 2.37. The gaps were filled when Hudson and Gross graduated from the minor leagues and won jobs. Along with Marty Bystrom, who had shoulder trouble last year, they gave the Phillies a recast front line. But the bullpen, led by the left-handed Holland and Hernandez and the right-handed Ron Reed, became the strength of the staff.

Handling the pitchers were Bo Diaz, who lost 51 points in his batting average but knocked in 64 runs, and the backup, Ozzie Virgil, who spent most of seven years in the minors before making the club. The pitchers have a solid line of defense in the Phillies' experienced infield. Rose, 42, had his least rewarding season: 121 hits and a .245 average. He was frequently replaced late in the season by the rookie Len Matuszek, who joined the team too late to qualify for the playoff. So Rose was back at first base, hitting .375 in the playoff and gaining his sixth World Series.

At second base, Morgan hit only .230 and was benched frequently. But like Rose, his teammate at Cincinnati in the 1970s, he is still rated

a dangerous money player. At third, Schmidt remains the long-ball threat as the major leagues' home-run leader. And, at shortstop, Ivan DeJesus led the team in durability by playing in 158 In the outfield, the Phillies often seemed to have a cast of thousands.

The two holdovers, Gary Matthews in left and Garry Maddox in center, did not have great seasons, although Matthews hit .429 with three home runs in the playoff. Once Hayes started to slip, the alignment often consisted of Lezcano, Greg Gross, and Lefebvre. They delivered: As starters, Lezcano hit .282. Gross bit .346 and Lefebvre hit 299. Lefebvre also played four positions, including The bottom line is that the Phillies have a solid defense behind balanced pitching, a superior bullpen, adequate power, little speed, and fine reserves. They are also hot. Counting the playoff, they have won 24 of their last 29 games.

CUERO, Texas - Paycheck, a Minnesota turkey, ran to victory Sunday on the state highway here, returning the title of turkey capital of the world to Worthington, Minnesota. A Cuero turkey, Ruby Begonia, came in first in this second heat of the Great Gobbler Gallop, but Paycheck's performance on home turf last month insured a better all-over score in the competition between the two cities.

By the same token, the local companies are oow on their own, and they have to charge Aunt Mary what it really costs to call her sister. It's every phone company for itself."

"Suppose everyone stops making long-distance calls to protest your surcharges?" I asked.

"That's fine with us because we're also going into electronic mail, the satellite business, and we will be the biggest telephone equip-ment supplier in the U.S. You can even use our lines to communicate by computer.

Can McDonald's and L.L. Bean Coexist?

Maine Town Ponders the Threat of Fast Food to Its Flannel Image

By Dudley Clendinen New York Times Service

F REEPORT, Maine — If Ronald McDonald wore a mackinaw and hip boots, and conducted business in a duck blind instead of under golden arches, he would be at home in this old town of 6,000 people.

But Freeport is home to a different enterprise: L.L. Bean, the merchandiser of sturdy clothes and no-nonsense values. Fast food is not flannel shirts, and plastic is not natural fiber. And thus the prospect of a McDonald's has been a subject of debate in this graceful country town.

"McDonald's," said Art Ross, chairman of the town's Planning Board, "is a moral issue. If Mo-Donald's came in, a part of Freeport that matters to people will never be the same."

But thanks to Bean's success. large parts of small Freeport are already not the same. Dazzled by the number of tourist-shoppers who make the pilgrimage to Bean's retail store bere, in an outof-the-way town in an out-of-the-way state, dozens of other merchants have set up shop in the past two years.

Rents are up. Tax assessments are close behind. The town's only grocery store has closed. Main Street has changed. A Dansk kitchenware outlet stands where Leighton's Five and Dime once stood. Barbizon Lingerie is in place of Mel's Sporting Goods. And Hathaway shirts, Cannon towels and a Ralph Lauren's outlet line the way.

"I think a lot of people feel that Freeport is at a crossroads," said Dale Olmstead, the town manager. "A lot of people are concerned that the growth is all tourist-related, and there are very few service stores left for the residents. With the prospect of another 25 retail establishments opening in the next year, it's becoming a shopping center for the state of Maine."

The oddity is that commercial success should make Freeport 2 cultural crossroads when it has never been a natural one. Northeast of Portland, southwest of Brunswick, tucked along the coast of Maine, Freeport has only one attraction: Bean.

"L.L." as he is remembered here - he died 15 years ago at the age of 94 - was a haberdasher. He developed a hunting boot and, in the first quarter of this century, began circulating a crude brochure of his boots and outdoor clothing to hunters licensed by the state. Word spread. Hunters and fishermen began stopping by at odd hours to pick up gear on their way north to the

To keep them away from his house, Bean posted a small sign at the door to his store: "Please ring bell 'til night watchman ap-

The growth continued, according to Kilt Andrew, the spokesman here for Bean. "Finally, in 1951, as L.L. said, he threw away the key to the front door," Andrew recalled. The retail store went into 24-hour operation. The catalog business grew:

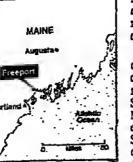

After assuming control in 1967, L.L. Bean's grandson broadened the product line to equip sports like cross-country skiing, hiking, backpacking and canoeing. Then came "The Preppy Handbook," which cast Bean as a chief supplier.

"The company has grown from net sales of $4.8 million in 1967 to $224.3 million in 1982," Andrew said. "If it wasn't a family company, I guess it would be a glamour stock."

In addition to the 30,000square-foot retail store in downtown Freeport, Bean's now has a sprawling, handsome center for manufacturing, distribution and administration that employs 1,500 people outside downtown.

In terms of dollar sales, said William T. End, Bean's senior vice president for marketing, the retail store has grown at a yearly rate of 20 percent in the past decade. It now generates about $30 million a year, the equivalent of $5,000 for each resident of Freeport.

An estimated 2.5 million people from all over the United States come to Freeport every year just to shop at Bean's. And that is what has brought what End refers to as "the influx of businesses piggybacking on us."

Residents date the beginning of the flood only two years back, to the fire that burned out Leigh-ton's Five and Dime. Edgar Leighton, who had had his store since World War II, didn't own the building. "My landlord sold the property," he said. A Boston developer bought it, remodeled it and raised the rent. In came Leighton's reopened on a side street. "I do get a little tired of being told that this arsonist did such great things for Freeport in terms of initiating the change," Leighton said.

As Leighton wearied, others grew wary, the rush came so fast. Ross, the planning chairman, was only appointed to the board about 30 months ago. The first 6 or 12 months, it was like a crypt in there," he said. "Then all of a sudden, it seemed like all hell was

A recent town survey has shown that almost 40 percent of Freeport's residents have moved here within the past 10 years. Many, like Ross and Gordon Hamlin, are business professionals. They have offices in Portland, Brunswick, Lewiston or Bath, but a preference for the small-town life of Freeport

Ross helped form and pass a ordinance that set up a board to control the design of any new or renovated buildings on Main Street downtown. Hamlin, when he heard that McDonald's wanted to build a franchise on a Main Street corner where Freeport's only traffic light now hangs, called a meeting of neighbors at the high school.

On the spot, they organized "The Freeport McAttack." They produced anti-McDonald's Tshirts. They circulated a petition against McDonald's and got 1,200 signatures.

"We sent it to the president of McDonald's, registered mail, re-turn receipt requested, along with a T-shirt and everything we could think of," Hamlin said. Part of the McAttack is that McDonald's, presumably with its golden arches, would replace "the historic Gore House," which has stood on the corner since 1850. In reply, James G. Pahner, the lawyer who represents McDon-ald's, was sardonic. "I've lived in Freeport for 16 years and I was unaware that was an historic site, even though I was a director of the Historical Society for awhile," he said.

As for golden arches? "Large plastic ones, superimposed over Main Street? Very doubtful," he

As the debate proceeds, Bean itself remains above the fray. "Bean is a given," said a town councilman, William B. Laint, You have to understand, they've So has Charles Richard Luce, who lives right in the middle, be-tween the boomlet downtown and the proposed McDonald's, two doors from each. A tidy man, an engineer, he retired two months ago. "I spent 30 years getting this house ready to retire in," he said one recent afternoon, The commercial growth threatens that. "Tm not opposed to growth," said Hamlin, a partner wonder if I can stand it."

Jimmy Carter says he will never do it again, but he is delighted that four chairs handcrafted by him from a hickory tree in his backyard sold for $41,000. The auction, at Sotheby Parke Bernet in New York, included 300 objects donated by the former president's friends and raised $318,297 towards construction of the $25-million Carter Library and Center at Emory University in Atlanta.
